OWNERSHIP OF JEWELLERY AND PLATE.

"Ruddigore," Gilbert and Sulivan's neglected paredy of lurid meiotrama, is being performed by the Rathmines and Rathgar Musical Society at the Gaiety Theatre this week, and promised last evening to be well up to the usual standard of the Society's productions. Why this supernatural operation has been so much neglected it is difficult to say, for the theme on which it is built is quite Gibbertian, and the treatment also—as witness the mecking refrain, "Hall the bridegroom, hall the bride "-while the soore includes some of Sulivan's daintiest examples. There is no doubt that succeeding performances will show improvement on those of last evening, as the members become more at home in their parts and on the stage. Under the direction of Mr. T. H. Weaving, the orchestra gave an excellent rendering to the music, while the chorus was trustworthy except in one attack. The members really showed their abilities in the madrigal towards the end of the first act. There seemed much most movement than usual, what with skipping, and minuet, while a kind of reel concluding the first act adapted the opera to local mank to the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat most of the shortcomings a pipeared, it was lat the pipear to be a stage of the shortcomings a pipeared and the stage in the most of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so much of the mishandling of syllables, which marks so

Alderman O'Beirne seconded. He said that barley and hops were being imported into Holland, and they were being imported into Holland, and they were being made into beer in Germany. It was a curious and significant thing that the famous old pot-stills of Dublin were silent and idle, while patent stills in that a great number of heifers were shipped at full speed. The stoppage of the Dublin breweries and distilleries resulted in a shortage of food for dairy cattle, and an alarming prospect was thus created. He feared the situation in Dublin in January and February next would be very serious. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. McConnell said the producer of milk got 4d. per quart under the Order, while the retailer was allowed 6d., and they thought the profit for retailing or delivering the milk was too much.

The undertaking given to the Cork deputation was repeated to the Belfastmen, so that after the necessary inquiries were made relief would be applied in any cases of hardship, but Sir Thomas Russell explained that in this matter every caution would be exercised.

We were in danger of believing that such horrors as those of the Lusitania had ceased upon the high seas. Mr. Frost tells us the bitter truth. We are overcoming the submarine menace steadily, but very slowly, and as long as it endures so long will these heartless and abominable crimes be committed around our coasts under the auspices of the Kaiser's heathen god. They are being committed heathen god. They are being committed as we write these words. Ten thousand men, women, and children have been murdered by German submarines. In September they were taking a daily toll of force was the Portuguese, holding for the country never had yielded, and never would yield. Queenstown he had official knowledge of the sinking of eighty-one ships which carried American citizens. The survivors' stories were given to Mr. Frost on the solemn oaths of men who had just escaped marvellously from death. They form a large part of the evidence on which the United States entered into the war. We shall not retail the collected horrors of this grim narrative—the treachery, brutality, and ape-like glee with which officers and men of the German Navy murdered old men and young women and children, jested at their last agonies, left them to perish of cold and hunger in tiny boats. The German policy of furchtbarkeit fury on the high seas, where only the eye of God is its witness. We should prefer to be able to think that the officers of the guess territory, evading the Portuguese to be able to think that the officers of the Kaiser's Navy—picked from the best German families—hate this murder of civiblians, and commit it only under the strictest orders. Mr. Frost's marrative and ammunition, and we may expect its strictest orders. Mr. Frost's marrative and ammunition, and we may expect its Asquit is a son of the ex-Premier,

It relied on the help' of the "gallant allies in Europe" who then supplied it with arms; and, so far as we can judge from its speeches, it looks for that help-to-day. Sinn Fein leaders say still that they would not refuse Germany's aid in another attempt at armed revolution. They express their hope that Germany will help them to get a hearing at the Peace Conference. We are entitled to assume, as we assume in the cases of Turkey and Buigaria, that Sinn Fein approves of Germany's conduct of the war. It must either approve or disapprove of these activities of its "gallant ally" which are set forth in Mr. Frost's narrative. So far as we know, there is no spoken or written evidence that it disaps. of the Sinn Fein Party and from the business in the public interest. spoken or written evidence that it disaphas been some evidence of Sinn Fein hostility to the sailors of the British and American Navies who are grappling day and night with the villainies of the German submarine. We hope that Sinn Fein will have the courage to tell us what it thinks of Mr. Frost's facts. We trust most devoutly, for the sake of Ireland's honour, that it will associate itself with the loathing of the whole civilised world. In any case, even if the Sinn Fein leaders people who call themselves Sinn Feiners to consider whether Ireland has anything to expect from the criminals who sank the Lusitania and the Laconia. We ask them to consider whether Germany's friendship is worth the loss of the friendship of France and the United States. We ask them to try to picture the reception which Sinn Fein emigrants will get in the United States after the war from the fathers and brothers of the men and women whose manner of death is recorded in the

The last of the Colonial campaigns, in East Africa, is now virtually at an end. The War Office announces to-day that the German territory has been wholly cleared of the enemy's forces. We printed yesterday a review from the War Office of the operations in this theatred during recent months. When they were resumed in August after the rains the German forces had been pressed into the southern extremity of the Colony, and were enclosed on the north by the British forces, on the east by the sea, on the south by Portuguese forces operating on the River which formed the British Press. It was delivered as an address at Cleveland, Ohio, by Mr. Wesley Frost, who was, until June of the present year, United States Consul at Queenstown. If this be true, our offensives in Palestine and Sesopotamia must have had much to do with the feeling. It is doubtful, however, whether anything will come of the agitation, for the war party, with Enver Pasha at its head, will fight for supremacy as long as possible.

I know Miss Lena Ashwell's "Concerts at the Front" Fund has been doing splendid work and deserves substantial support; but I am doubtful whether the ladies who organised the Petticoat Lane Fair, which opened at the Albert Hall this afternoon, have chosen an altogether satisfactory method of helping it. No doubt, a good deal of money will be raked in but.

A draper's shop in the West End is giving priority during its sale this week to people who invested money in the War Loan between last Wednesday and Saturday. Before the shop opened this morning eight hundred people had lined up outside. There was actually a queue of twelve people waiting last night at nine o'clock. Other great stores in the West End are selling War Bonds, and offering handsome prizes, ranging from a pound to five hundred pounds. This is a kind of Premium Bond arrangement, and it will be interesting to see what the result will prove to be. If it is very successful, the Government may be encouraged to take the plunge, though there is a general feeling that they are not inclined to do so and that the report of the Committee now sitting will not alter their opinion.

THE MILITARY MATINEE.

The military matings in aid of the Irish Times Red Cross Fund announced for next Saturday at the Theotre Royal promises to attract a large audience. The organisers have arranged a programme of unusual merit. A somewhat new departure in musical sketches is included, popular musical numbers being woven into a story of actissic life entitled "A Singer's Romance." The scenario is arranged by Mr. Bruce Ray, author of a number of successful sketches. In the cast will be Miss Cathleeg Gavin (softrano), Sergeant Thompson, High-Gavin (sobrano), Sergeant Thompson, Highland Light Infantry (a musical comedy artist), and Miss C. Hayden. Play-goers are looking to the first performance in Dublin of Mr. Jamea Bernard Fagan's one-act play, "The Fourth of August, 1914." The paris are in the hards of Lieutenant Alan Hunter, King Edward's Horse, a young actor, who was making his nark in the dramatic profession when the war broke out, Mr. S. W. Maddock, who will be seen in the rôle of an enigmatical Rajah; Colonel Hawes, C.B.; Lieutenant Fisher, Lieutenant Ramsay, Lieutenant B. A. C. Herspath, all of King Edward's Horse. The musical items will be very attractive. They will be contributed by Trooper Fishlock (King Edward's Horse), Lance-Corporal E. Mitchell (Highland Light Infantry), and Mr. Melfort D'Alton. There will be 'turus' by some of the artists appearing at be "turns" by some of the artists appearing at the theatre during the week, and selections by the orchestra of the theatre, under Mr. John Moody. The net result of the first stages, says The Times, of the whole German counter-attack is that the stroke at the Bourlon Wood and the entire northern part of the operation met with failure which must be pronounced disastrous, view of the cumulative evidence of the heavy losses of the enemy. From a point Marcoing, southwards, the Germans have regained a relatively narrow strip of the Villers, Guislaun, and Masnières define the sum total of their gains, though the fluctuaions of the battle are only reckoned in villages as a convenient method of indicating We have lost a number of prsoners and guns, though not to the extent Germane claim, and in the single month November we took many thousand more ersoners than they did on Friday. The battle still continuing, though our Special Correspendent says it is now raging only at the southern end of the salient. He warns us, however, that it has "assumed immense protions," and he mentions the computation that the enemy are now employing two hundred thousand infantry in their efforts to deprive Sir Julian Byng of the fruits of his victory. It is even said that Hindenburg himself has hurried to the scene of the conflict, accompanied by the faithful Ludendorff. Our Correspondent further says that captured plans indicate the gnitude of the original German aims, and also, it may be added, the extent to which they hars so far failed. The impression seems to be that one of the greatest battles of the war is developing, and that the enemy are staking

Ten thousand men, women, and children have now been killed by German submarines. Every month sees losses equal to those of the Lusitania horror; and every day the death of forty-five innocent civilians. At this moment the poor fellows from two or three vessels are fighting for breath.

The ocean south of Ireland is the most crowded highway of commerce in the world, and lifted the exhausted young men, now weak as infants, out of the very jaws of an awful south of Polygon Wood, in the Ypres region, we have improved our position, and taken

You have all, doubtless, read of the consumption of benzine which has taken place in the United States during the past few years. The consumption there has now gone up to 500,000 tons per annum—or to about six times the total pre-war consumption of the United Kingdom and Europe, the population of which is vastly greater, and with the new aviation demand which is now being created, America's very much larger. The same ratio of consumption will, given the necessary supplies of spirit, sooner or later be developed on this side of the Atlantic, and, as it will be quite impossible for the United States to meet this demand, even if she can spare any at all for export, it is obvious that there is ample room in these markets for all the spirit that can be produced elsewhere for many years to come.
